THE FOLIAGE BROKE YOUR FALL!

Morgan and Melanie Smith were sitting in their treehouse. They were reading a book about men who had traveled to the center of the earth. Morgan finished reading the last page and closed the book. "Wow! That was a real exciting book!" he exclaimed. "It certainly was!" agreed his twin sister. "Do you think the center of the earth is really like the book described it?" asked Melanie. She looked her twin brother right in the eye. He thought for a moment and then he laughed. "Don't be silly. The book we read is just a story. There are no giant monsters or creepy plants below the earth's surface," he answered. "I'm not so sure about that," she said.

Melanie was mad. Morgan always thought her questions were silly or stupid. "I read in my science book that the center of the earth could be hollow. If it is, who knows what is down there? Do you know, Mr. Know-it-all?" snapped Melanie. "I don't know for sure! No one knows. No one has ever been to the center of the earth," answered Morgan.

"Then, maybe giant monsters and creepy plants do live at the center of the earth," teased Melanie. She never liked her brother to get the best of her in an argument. "I'll bet that there are only rocks and molten lava at the center of the earth," shouted Morgan. He hated losing an argument with his twin sister. "I'll bet you're wrong," she said. "Well, let's take a trip to the center of the earth and find out what is down there," suggested Morgan. "Do you mean we should take the Wonder Wagon down there?" asked Melanie. "Why not?" answered her brother.

"Suppose the center of the earth isn't hollow? Then what?" she asked. The Wonder Wagon will protect us. It always does. It protected us when we went to the bottom of the ocean," explained Morgan. Melanie smiled and nodded. The two twins climbed down out of the treehouse. They ran into the garage where they kept the magic Wonder Wagon hidden.

The Wonder Wagon had magic powers. It was given to the twins by an old magician. The twins had shared their lunch with the mysterious magician and he rewarded them by giving them the wagon. It looked like a normal, red wagon with strange symbols pointed on it; but it wasn't! It could transport the twins to any place they wanted to go. They had already visited the past, the future and several other thrilling places.

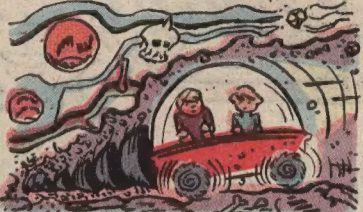

Morgan pulled the Wonder Wagon out from behind some crates. He hopped in and Melanie hopped in behind him. They held on tightly. Morgan said the magic words. "I wonder if this wagon can take us to the center of the earth?" he shouted. Suddenly, the wagon's wheels began to turn. Thick, white smoke fogged up the garage. The wagon began to spin in circles.

The twins blacked out. When they opened their eyes, they were in outer space. They could see the earth far below them. The Wonder Wagon dove towards the earth. It looked like they would crash into a mountain. A plastic dome appeared and covered the entire wagon. The front of the wagon changed into a giant drill. The drill bore its way through the mountainside and headed for the center of the earth.

The twins passed the eerie, buried skeletons of prehistoric monsters. They passed giant, twinkling diamonds as they burrowed deeper into the earth's crust. They saw strange, fossilized plants and spooky, rock formations. The Wonder Wagon stopped drilling when it reached a large, dark cave. The plastic bubble disappeared and the twins stepped out of the wagon. All around them were giant mushrooms.

"This is it! We're at the center of the earth. It is hollow!" said Morgan. Melanie grabbed onto her brother's arm. She was afraid. There were giant stalagmites and stalactites on the floor and roof of the cave. Glowing, luminous rocks provided spooky lighting. Suddenly, there was a monstrous roar. A giant, pure white lizard crawled out of a hole in the wall. He started to move towards the twins. The monster wanted to eat mushrooms; but the twins thought he wanted to eat them! They jumped back into the wagon. "I wonder if this wagon can take us home again?" Melanie shouted. There was a puff of smoke and in a flash they were home again.

"I won the bet!" Melanie said to her brother. Morgan shrugged his shoulders. He pushed the Wonder Wagon back behind the crates. "Big deal!" he answered. He didn't want to give his sister the satisfaction of knowing he was mad.
